

New look for Association's web site

The Burlington Conservative Association has revamped its web site and added links to communicate more effectively through social media.

After extensive consultation with members of the community, web designers and social media experts, the association's communications committee closed the old site and set to work to produce pages that are eye-catching, informative, interactive and easy to navigate.

Our new shortened Internet address is www.bconservative.ca or visitors can find the Burlington Conservative Association via Google and other search engines.

Tabs on the home page provide instant access to our Twitter and Facebook sites to ensure the association can effectively communicate with the widest possible audience in a timely fashion.

Association president Greg Arnocki said the web site will carry up-to-the-minute information, alert people to events and share direct messages from our Twitter feed. "It's an excellent communication tool," he said.

Membership Renewal

There are several people who haven't renewed their annual membership with the Burlington Conservative Association. Please get the form from our web site and send the completed application with your personal cheque to:

City celebrates Canada Day with events at lakefront park

More than two dozen people were sworn in as Canadian citizens during a special ceremony held in conjunction with Canada Day celebrations at Spencer Smith Park. The day-long event included a dog show, rides for kids, live music and a performance by the Burlington Teen Tour Band. The Burlington Conservative Association was also on hand with a photo booth and fishing contest for youngsters.

Big Lots store brings jobs
Burlington MP Mike Wallace was on hand when the Big Lots store opened on Guelph Line in September. They hired managers and retail staff.
